Continuation of Substance of Interview including description of the general nature of what was discussed: Applicant advised that related application 10/882,358 was also under examination and that 10/285,188, a Novartis case available as a PGPUB document, was a potential basis for an interference.

Examiner suggested that the 112, first paragraph rejections and the first rejection under 112, second paragraph, were in effect three attempts to question enablement and should be considered one rejection. Applicant wanted to know why the figure was objected to. Examiner showed applicant the copy of the figure presently in the case. Applicant indicated that a new figure would be submitted. Applicant also indicated that the first paragraph continuation/related case information would also be updated.

Applicant indicated that the obviousness-type double patenting rejection would be addressed with a terminal disclaimer.

In discussions of the art rejections, applicant argued that the instant process dissolves ribavirin and then produces a pelleted product which apparently has the same crystal form of ribavirin as originally used as starting material, an unexpected result. Applicant also noted that the process of Lebovitz '128 was fundamentally different because it was a dry process, selected apparently in order to preserve the crystal form of the ribavirin.

Examiner suggested that opinion declarations were not particularly useful, but that declarations which add facts to the case record would be considered helpful. Applicant supplied a set of proposed amendments including amendments to the last two claims directed to pharmaceutical compositions, claims which examiner thought to be unlikely to be granted in view of the prior art. Applicant agreed to respond promptly to all outstanding issues. No agreements were reached concerning allowable subject matter.
